

Indiana has done an excellent job in crafting its "do not call" list. It does what it was intended to do, and is (in my opinion) a better piece of legislation than its counterpart at the national level. I hope that the FCC will not weaken the laws of the several states that have them. I oppose any changes at the federal level that would weaken the Indiana law.